

Journal of Language and Politics

Edited by Ruth Wodak and Paul Chilton
University of Vienna / University of East Anglia

The Journal of Language and Politics represents a forum for analysing and discussing the various dimensions in the interplay of language and politics. The basic assumption is that the language of politics cannot be separated from the politics of language. The notion of 'Political Discourse' opens up to the 'institutional' field of politics (e.g. parliamentary discourse, election campaigns, party programmes, speeches, etc.) and to all linguistic manifestations that may be considered to be political. In order to illuminate new and old forms of political discourses inter- and transdisciplinary perspectives and elaborated linguistic methodologies have to complement each other.

Articles bring together sociological concepts, political theories, and historical analysis focusing on different dimensions (pragmatics, semantics, social cognition, semiotics) of political discourse, interdiscursivity and intertextuality with other discourses, e.g. economic and scientific discourses.
