Celebrating 30 years of commitment to Indigenous language education

AILDI was founded in 1978 with the support from the National Endowment for the Humanities to support communities in Indigenous language education. The proposal was drafted by Lucille Watahomigie, a Hualapai educator and language activist and Dr. Leanne Hinton, a linguist, from the University of California, Berkeley. Also involved were Dr. Akira Yamamoto, Dr. Teresa McCarty and Dr. Ofelia Zepeda.

Each year, those interested in Indigenous language education attend our four week summer residential program centered around a specific theme. Our participants enroll in two 3-unit courses that are transferable to UA degrees and other universities and college. AILDI courses are designed to train participants to apply their knowledge and skills in their teaching at school or in the community, as well as to learn methods that incorporate appropriate linguistic and cultural knowledge into the curriculum. In addition, participants share their "microteaching" lessons (short lessons that are taught in an Indigenous language) that integrate concepts and ideas from classes taken during the month.

Over the past 30 years, participants and faculty members travel from different parts of the country and bring with them rich experiences of working with Indigenous language communities. AILDI has continued to expand its program to include conferences, symposia, workshops, poetry readings, cultural activities and performances, and guest lectures by internationally known language educators and researchers. And in 2009, AILDI will hold its 1st annual benefit dinner.

American Indian Language Development Institute

30 YEAR TRADITION
OF SPEAKING FROM OUR HEART
June 8—July 2, 2009

1st Annual AILDI Benefit Dinner

Every June, AILDI participants partake in this unique opportunity to be surrounded by community language organizers and educators, cultural specialists, practitioners, mentors, language and policy makers, tribal representatives, language advocates, professors, administrators, and undergraduate and graduate students, for one month, to focus on the reclamation and revitalization of their Indigenous languages, many of which are endangered. It is an exciting and unique program – and one that is threatened.

In the face of budget cuts, and dwindling financial resources for students, AILDI is taking steps to initiate a self-sufficient approach to bring in participants involved in Indigenous language education. The historical policies of the Federal Government in relation to Native American languages has recently made a reversal to allow tribes and nations to speak their Native American languages in school. Through the passage of the Esther Martinez Language Act, Native American tribes can move forward in the initiation of developing school curriculum to address their specific local needs.

Purpose

To raise funds for AILDI participants and to celebrate 30 years of AILDI's commitment to Indigenous language education.

Goal

To provide $25,000 or more in scholarships for Indigenous language students and educators to attend AILDI.

How your monies will be used

- $10,000 Tuition and Registration for four students to attend an AILDI Summer Program.
- $5,000 Tuition and Registration for two students to attend an AILDI Summer Program.
- $2,500 Tuition and Registration for one student to attend an AILDI Summer Program.
- $1,000 Partial tuition and registration for one student to attend an AILDI Summer Program.

How scholarship recipients will be determined

Participants are required to submit an application along with their registration forms, as well as meet criteria set forth by the AILDI Scholarship committee. Scholarship recipients will be recognized at the closure of the summer AILDI program and will be asked to write a letter of gratitude to their sponsor who made this funding possible.

The American Indian Language Development Institute:
A Thirty Year Tradition of Speaking from Our Heart
June 8-July 2, 2009

30th Anniversary Symposium
June 29 - July 2, 2009

Please join us for the 30th Annual American Indian Language Development Institute which will be held at the University of Arizona. AILDI 2009 will offer a variety of classes, special presentations, workshops, and events to help celebrate our 30 years of commitment to Indigenous language education.

Course Topics, Special Presentations & Workshops include...

- Language immersion methods for language revitalization
- Documenting your language through film
- Native American linguistics for your community
- Native American children's literature
- Language and Native American youth culture
- Development of materials for your language classrooms

AILDI's mission is to mobilize efforts to document, revitalize and promote Indigenous languages, reinforcing the processes of intergenerational language transfer. AILDI plays a critical role in ongoing outreach, training, and collaborative partnerships with educators, schools and Indigenous communities nationally and internationally through the use of multiple resources.
