

UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA - TUCSON
Research Study Recruitment Flyer

Persons involved in Indigenous language education broadly conceived are invited to participate in the “Technology and Indigenous language revitalization: case studies of technology training and practice of the American Indian Language Development Institute (AILDI) students” study. Candace K. Galla, Ph.D. Candidate and Principal Investigator will direct this survey project documenting technology use amongst Indigenous communities.

I seek to recruit participants who meet the following criteria:

- a. Is involved in Indigenous language education broadly conceived and can offer insights on Indigenous languages, technology and its efforts made towards language revitalization
- b. Have access to internet to complete an online survey questionnaire
- c. 18 years of age or older

Note: Both male and female students are encouraged to participate in this study.

To participate in this study or to know more about the project, please contact me at the email address: Tech.IndgLangRev.Study@gmail.com. A unique link to the online survey will be provided and you may complete the survey online.

Information about the Investigator:

Candace K. Galla, Native Hawaiian with research interests in Indigenous language education, revitalization and technology, is a PhD Candidate in the Department of Language, Reading and Culture in the College of Education at the University of Arizona. She is also the Program Coordinator of the American Indian Language Development Institute.