HEC Recognized

(Y Category)

The authors and researchers across the globe are invited to publish their empirical reports, research articles, book reviews in the relevant areas of language and literature in the Research Journal of Language and Literary Studies (RJLS). RJLS is a bi-annual blind peer reviewed research journal. All submissions are scrutinized through desk, national and international review process. Initially, the papers are checked whether they meet the basic standards of the journal in terms of relevance of area, scholarship, length, clarity of expression and presentation and are further submitted to local and foreign experts for final comments and selection. The identities of authors and reviewers remain anonymous throughout this procedure. The contributors are encouraged to submit on all relevant areas of language, linguistics and literature and must follow guidelines specified on the website of the journal.
