

The 31st Penn Linguistics Colloquium: Call for Papers

The 31st Annual Penn Linguistics Colloquium will take place February 23-25, 2007 at the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia.

Keynote Speaker:

Harald Clahsen
University of Essex

"Psycholinguistic studies of grammatical representation:
Evidence from acquisition, processing, and disorders"

Special Session:

"Integrating Models of Language Change"

Papers on any topic in linguistics and associated fields are welcome, for both the general sessions and the special session. Speakers will have 20 minutes for their presentations and 5 minutes for discussion and questions.

Deadline: Abstracts are due by Wednesday, November 15, 2006. Notification of acceptance/rejection will be given on Monday, January 15, 2007.

Length: Please limit abstracts to one page, single- or double-spaced, using 1" margins on all sides and 11pt font size. An additional page may be used for references and tables. Do not include your name or affiliation within the abstract.

Abstract submission will be done online, on the PLC website: <http://www.ling.upenn.edu/Events/PLC/>. Follow the "Abstracts" link, and follow the instructions there. When submitting your abstract, please specify whether you would like to be considered for the general sessions or the special session.

Proceedings: Conference proceedings will be published as a volume of the Penn Working Papers in Linguistics. Speakers will be invited to provide camera-ready copies of their papers after the Colloquium.
