Call for proposals

Society for Linguistic Anthropology
Interdisciplinary Public Engagement Conference Award
Deadline: October 1, 2019 for conferences in 2020

SLA announces an initiative to fund conference submissions promoting the dissemination of activist linguistic anthropology work at venues beyond the AAA meetings, in order to promote collaboration across sub-disciplinary and disciplinary boundaries. In previous years, SLA has supported special colloquia on linguistic anthropology and social justice at the American Association of Applied Linguistics conferences, at the LSA and elsewhere, though support is not limited to AAAL or Linguistics-specific conferences.

Up to $250 per presenter for up to eight presenters, for reimbursement of conference travel expenses is available, with a cap of $2,000 per year. Conference travel expenses include any combination of conference registration, air or ground travel, hotel, and meals, and receipts are required for reimbursement. While the session chair must be a current SLA member, presenters do not all need to be SLA members. However, only current SLA members can receive the travel reimbursement.

We encourage theoretically sophisticated, methodologically innovative proposals that enhance public understanding of language in relation to social equality, challenging problematic “common sense” language assumptions and ideologies. We particularly encourage proposals that extend work pursued by the joint CfHR (Committee for Human Rights) and SLA Committee on Language and Social Justice (e.g. on pejorative naming practices, language policies, and typifications of language forms and practices that naturalize inequalities) as well as AAA initiatives. We would prioritize accordingly, assessing proposals as part of a general SLA initiative promoting public outreach and education.

The deadline for applications is October 1, 2019 to fund conference participation during 2020. Send completed applications & supporting materials to SLA Secretary-Treasurer Constantine V. Nakassis (cnakassi@uchicago.edu) for consideration by the SLA board.
