Job Description:

The Linguistics Program at Binghamton University (SUNY) (<https://www.binghamton.edu/linguistics/>) invites applications for a Tenure-Track Assistant Professor position in Linguistics. We seek candidates with a specialization in historical linguistics, historical language change, quantitative language change, or language evolution. The selected candidate will be expected to teach undergraduate and graduate level courses, to mentor undergraduate and graduate students, to conduct and publish research, to attend and present research findings at national and international conferences and to pursue external research funding. The successful applicant will also help create and supervise a language laboratory, which will address their own research needs as well as serve to train students interested in linguistic analysis. The selected candidate is also expected to participate in regular service activities for the program and university.

The Linguistics Program at Binghamton University offers an interdisciplinary, historical, and cross-cultural approach to language. The program is committed to advancing a culture of diversity, equity, and inclusion. We fully support spaces of learning that grapple with the historic and present legacies of structural racism, class and gender inequality, sexual and gender discrimination, and social injustice. Candidates committed to working with a diverse student body and committed to the college mission are encouraged to apply.

Binghamton University is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

Requirements:

- Ph.D. in Linguistics or related fields by the time of appointment.
- Demonstrated commitment to and excellence in undergraduate or graduate teaching.

Applicants with a record of scholarly publishing and evidence of grant submission to external funding agencies are especially welcome.
