Reclaiming lost language

Wed 26 Feb, 6pm | SLQ Gallery, State Library of Queensland | Free

Language allows us to share stories about who we are, our culture and our identity. When language is lost, we lose much more than words, we lose our ability to connect across generations.

With three quarters of Aboriginal languages already lost, digital technologies are providing communities with new opportunities to share and revitalise Australia's original languages.

Join us for a panel discussion exploring how these technologies are being used to maintain, revitalise and bring to life lost languages for future generations of Australians.

With special guests:

Rory O'Connor, Director, Yugambah Museum, Language and Heritage Research Centre

Des Crump, Indigenous Languages Researcher, Queensland Memory, State Library of Queensland

Ruth Ghee, Language Worker and Cultural Consultant
