Call for Papers

The South-East Asian Linguistics Society (SEALS) provides a forum to share research findings at various stages or thought provoking ideas on the languages and linguistics of Southeast Asia, including Austroasiatic, Austronesian, Hmong-Mien, Tibeto-Burman and Tai-Kadai language families. Linguistic investigations that interest the SEALS cover a range of topics including descriptive, theoretical, or historical linguistics, linguistics anthropology (ethnolinguistics, language attitude and ideology, discourse and conversation analysis, language and gender, language and politics), language planning, literacy and bilingual education.

Abstracts are invited for papers on any of the following themes related to Southeast Asian Languages:

- Space in Southeast Asian Languages: trajectory, deixis, directionality, metaphorical space etc...
- Discourse in Southeast Asian Languages: information structure, discourse markers discourse construction, etc.
- Corpus and variation in Southeast Asian Languages: data, variation, analysis, structure, normalization, usages, etc...

Furthermore, we invite papers on any aspect of language or linguistics related to languages of Southeast Asia.
